A Veteran's Peace

A veteran feels the peace of passing,
His brothers feel the sense of missing.
That time of friendship remains eternal,
That veteran's heart now held by an angel.

But fear no loss as the battlefield warns,
Grief has endured those wretched storms,
Now eternal rest has taken hold,
This veteran's spirit now unfolds.

Peace takes the heart to eternal rest,
This child of Greatness passed the test.
He gives us strength to carry on,
We do it now; he is reborn.

Peace to those who remain behind,
Let no grief restrain the mind.
We will meet again some future time,
For that event the bells now chime.

In Silent Memory...

On July 11, while on a vacation to Belize with his family, VFW Post 12098 Commander, Henry Pasinski, passed over into Paradise. On the day before, Post Member Ray Persson, preceded Hank into the afterlife of peace and tranquility. This month also saw the passing of Tammy Baldwin and Morton J. Koval.

No words can adequately describe the sacrifice and the scars that they all carried. They acquired them while defending their homeland and following the orders given them while they served their country on active duty.

The wonder of the American veterans, no matter what service that they were a part of, was how they each, in their own way, distinguished their common service with superior performance.

We, as comrades of all these members, know the individual service and personal heroism that is rarely announced and that each performed.

We salute them as they proceed on to their next duty station. We will miss, but not forget, each one of them. May the grace of the Almighty Commander be placed upon them.
